Preamble

The inception of the Central Hindu Military Education Society (CHMES) traces back to the formulation of a Military Training Model as a measure for nation-building, perceived by the visionary Revered Dr. Balkrushna Shivram Moonje, a notable social reformer and philanthropist. Dr. Moonje recognized the significance of Military Education even prior to India's independence. He staunchly advocated the Indianization of armed forces, asserting the indispensable role of Military Training for the youth in shaping a robust nation. He pioneered military education in India, asserting that national strength is intrinsically tied to military prowess, essential for earning respect among peers.

He aimed at equipping the nation with capable young officers, nurturing, and preparing them to serve the armed forces through rigorous training and practical exercises. His military education ethos revolved around 'Power of knowledge and knowledge of Power,' emphasizing the duty of every individual to defend the motherland.

Over a period of time, CHMES established various units, each embodying Dr. Moonje's philosophy on Military Education. These educational institutions of CHMES impart value-based education aligned with core values of CHMES, installing patriotism, leadership, and discipline among students and stakeholders—a distinguishing feature across all CHMES units.

'Nation First' is the fundamental ethos of CHMES, fostering our spirit of national service, strategic thinking, and effective execution among students and stakeholders.

CHMES plays a pivotal role in cultivating a security-conscious society, providing robust preparatory military training, and inculcating a tradition of prioritizing national interests over individual ones. As an institution renowned for its proficient Military Training and Value-Based Education globally, CHMES inspires millions to lead and confront the nation's challenges while upholding its honor.
